

TECHNOLOGY POLICY IMPLICATIONS FOR THE STRATEGIC SECTOR

Prof Manan Suri
IIT Delhi

Prof Archana Upadhyay
JNU

Deepak
Malhotra

For any nation to emerge as a global scientific and intellectual force, it needs to leverage its technological capital. India has several outstanding research institutes in various scientific fields which form the bedrock of its national innovative capability as well as sustainable economic competitiveness.

This research intends to identify data matrixes and sources and through modelling examine available data with an aim to provide insights to aid in policy development so that decision makers are positioned to capitalize on the information generated.